[ECF No. 27]

Motion for Summary Judgment
[ECF No. 28]

19 20 I. INTRODUCTION

21 Before the Court is Plaintiff Todd Leany's ("Leany") Motion for Summary Judgment, ECF
22 No. 27, and Defendant Zurich American Insurance Company's ("Zurich") Motion for Summary
23 Judgment, ECF No. 28.

24
25 II. PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

26 This matter arises from the initiation of arbitration proceedings in which Zurich seeks to 27 hold Leany liable for Century Steel Incorporation's ("Century Steel") alleged debts under the alter 28 ego doctrine. Zurich filed an arbitration demand on July 29, 2016 with the American Arbitration

1 Association (“AAA”), seeking to recover $305,550 allegedly owed to Zurich by Century Steel.
2 Zurich named Century Steel and Leany as respondents. While Century Steel responded to the 3 arbitration proceedings, Leany did not. Leany instead initiated this suit against Zurich on August 4 10, 2016.

5 In this suit, Leany asserts two claims: (1) a claim for declaratory relief that Leany is not 6 the alter ego of Century Steel and therefore is not subject to the arbitration proceedings; and (2) a 7 claim for injunctive relief that prohibits Zurich from seeking to subject Leany to the arbitration 8 proceedings. ECF No. 1. Zurich answered the complaint on October 18, 2016, asserting a 9 counterclaim for declaratory relief that Leany is the alter ego of Century steel and that the AAA 10 therefore has jurisdiction over Leany in the arbitration proceedings. ECF No. 7. Both parties now 11 move for summary judgment. ECF Nos. 27, 28, 30 (corrected image of ECF No. 28). After the 12 motions for summary judgment were fully briefed, ECF Nos. 32–35, the Court held oral argument 13 on September 11, 2018, ECF No. 38.

14 15 III. FACTUAL BACKGROUND

16 The Court incorporates by reference any factual findings made on the record at the 17 September 11, 2018 hearing. The Court summarizes and supplements those findings here.

18 a. Undisputed Facts

19 The Court finds the following facts to be undisputed. Century Steel was founded in 1972 20 by Lynn Leany (“Lynn Leany”)—the father of Todd Leany—and his two business partners. By 21 the early 2000s, it became one of the largest structural steel companies in the Western United 22 States, grossing millions of dollars annually. Various shareholders and investors were involved in 23 Century Steel during its active years of operation and engaged in selling or redeeming their shares 24 in Century Steel. Century Steel maintained corporate records throughout its time as an active 25 corporation.

26 Leany’s material involvement with Century Steel began in 1993, at which time Leany 27 began working as a purchasing agent and logistics manager for Century Steel. In 1998, Leany was 28 tasked with overseeing Century Steel’s California operations. In December 2000, the Board of 1 Directors (“Board”)—Lynn Leany, two business partners, and Leany—elected Leany as the 2 president of the company. Leany began to oversee the day-to-day operations of Century Steel’s 3 Las Vegas headquarters. Leany has never owned any voting shares in Century Steel.

4 Century Steel first contracted with Zurich in February 2000 by purchasing a general
5 insurance policy (“GL policy”). The GL policy was renewed annually through 2007. The GL 6 Policy provided protection to Century Steel for claims of bodily injury and property damage.
7 Under the policy, property damage included damages arising from construction defects—a liability
8 that backdates to the completion of a construction project but that could arise years later. Century
9 Steel also contracted with Zurich to purchase a workers’ compensation policy (“WC policy”) 10 (collectively with the GL policy, “insurance policies”) in February 2002. The WC policy was also 11 renewed annually through 2007. The insurance policies required Century Steel to pay deductibles 12 depending on the nature of settled claims. Both insurance policies ended on December 31, 2007.

13 In conjunction with the insurance policies, Century Steel and Zurich entered into a 14 deductible agreement each year. The deductible agreements required Century Steel to deposit 15 funds into an escrow account and to provide a letter of credit in favor of Zurich. Under the 16 deductible agreements, Zurich would settle and pay claims submitted under the insurance policies.
17 Zurich would then draw upon the escrow fund or the letter of credit to obtain the deductible 18 amounts owed rather than invoicing Century Steel for each individual insurance claim. Zurich 19 determined the amounts Century Steel was required to deposit in the escrow account and extend 20 through the letter of credit. Leany signed the insurance policies and the deductible agreements in 21 his capacity as Century Steel’s president. He did not, however, personally guaranty either the 22 insurance policies or the deductible agreements.

23 On March 30, 2006, Century Steel was recapitalized. New stock issued to remaining 24 shareholders. Lynn Leany retained the only voting shares of the stock and transferred the 25 remaining non-voting shares of the stock to Leany and Leany’s sister, Tamara Leany Hunt 26 (“Hunt”). Lynn Leany continued to maintain an office at Century Steel headquarters, serve as a 27 member of the Board of Directors, and acted as the sole voting shareholder. He was the only 28 person to ever hold a majority percentage of voting shares in Century Steel and was the principal

1 of Century Steel at the time it was sold in 2008. His estate continues to own the only voting shares
2 in Century Steel to date.

3 Century Steel was sold to Pacific Coast Steel ("Pacific Steel") on April 1, 2008. Pacific 4 Steel purchased the entirety of Century Steel's operations for 151.5 million dollars, including most 5 of the outstanding contracts, equipment, and assets. But Pacific Steel did not purchase Century
6 Steel's obligations under the insurance policies or the deductible agreements. Century Steel 7 retained only certain assets, including real property, a few contracts, and operating capital.

8 At the time of the sale, Century Steel paid off millions of dollars in debt to secured and 9 unsecured creditors. It also set aside approximately two million dollars in operating capital to 10 satisfy creditors that were not satisfied from the sale proceeds. Century Steel also purchased a 11 discontinued operations insurance policy from a nonparty insurance broker and provided an 12 increase to the letter of credit in favor of Zurich for the prior insurance policies. The remaining 13 proceeds were subsequently distributed to the existing shareholders: three trusts benefiting Lynn 14 Leany, Leany, and Hunt. Approximately thirty million dollars was distributed to the trust 15 benefitting Leany.

16 Century Steel amended its Articles of Incorporation thereafter, modifying the bylaws to 17 allow for only two Board members. Lynn Leany and Leany served as the two Board members.
18 Lynn Leany continued to hold the only voting shares in the company. Lynn Leany passed away 19 in March 2013, at which time (or shortly thereafter) Leany became the sole Board member and 20 officer of Century Steel. While he does not directly own any shares of Century Steel, his trust held 21 58.5% of the outstanding stock as recently as 2015.

22 On November 18, 2013, Zurich notified Century Steel that $305,550 was due under the 23 deductible agreements based on Zurich's continued management of claims submitted under the 24 insurance policies. Zurich notified Century Steel of the debt as it had already exhausted the letter 25 of credit and the escrow funds. However, by this time, the two million dollars set aside from the 26 sale of Century Steel had also been exhausted as the result of additional debts and unforeseen 27 litigation. After no response from Century Steel, Zurich made a final demand for the alleged debt 28 on October 28, 2015. Leany responded on behalf of Century Steel on November 3, 2015, stating

1 that Century Steel ceased operations in 2008 and has no remaining assets or capital to pay the 2 alleged debt five years after its sale.

3 Since the sale of Century Steel, Leany has not wound down or dissolved the corporation.
4 Further, as the sole Board member and officer, Leany has not held Board meetings since 5 approximately 2014. Leany has personally loaned Century Steel funds to assist Century Steel in 6 satisfying certain obligations, e.g. other debts and litigation costs. While smaller personal loans 7 have not been documented through promissory notes, promissory notes are executed for larger 8 loans. Leany has not been paid back in full for the loans he has made and has not been paid for 9 the interest on the loans. Leany refuses to loan Century Steel funds to satisfy the alleged debt 10 claimed by Zurich.

11 b. Disputed Facts

12 The parties dispute whether Century Steel can be described as an undercapitalized 13 corporation since it now lacks any assets or capital following the depletion of the funds set aside 14 from its sale. The parties also dispute the reasoning for which Leany has yet to wind down and 15 dissolve the corporation. Zurich contends that Leany has failed to do so to use Century Steel as a 16 shield from creditors. Leany disagrees, stating that the corporation was not wound down or 17 dissolved based on it owning certain assets for some time after the sale, managing certain bank 18 accounts and insurance contracts, and being named as a party to litigation.

20 IV. LEGAL STANDARD

21 Summary judgment is appropriate when the pleadings, depositions, answers to 22 interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show “that there is no 23 genuine dispute as to any material fact and the movant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law.”
24 Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a); accord Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 322 (1986). When considering 25 the propriety of summary judgment, the court views all facts and draws all inferences in the light 26 most favorable to the nonmoving party. Gonzalez v. City of Anaheim, 747 F.3d 789, 793 (9th Cir.
27 2014). If the movant has carried its burden, the non-moving party “must do more than simply 28 show that there is some metaphysical doubt as to the material facts Where the record taken

1 as a whole could not lead a rational trier of fact to find for the nonmoving party, there is no genuine
2 issue for trial.” Scott v. Harris, 550 U.S. 372, 380 (2007) (alteration in original) (internal quotation
3 marks omitted). It is improper for a court to resolve genuine factual disputes or make credibility 4 determinations at the summary judgment stage. Zetwick v. Cty. of Yolo, 850 F.3d 436, 441 (9th 5 Cir. 2017) (citations omitted).

6 7 V. DISCUSSION

8 The parties dispute whether Leany is the alter ego of Century Steel. “The alter ego doctrine 9 is a judicially created doctrine that the Nevada Legislature codified for corporations in 2001.”
10 Gardner on Behalf of L.G. v. Eighth Judicial Dist. Court in & for Cty. of Clark, 405 P.3d 651, 656 11 (Nev. 2017) (citing Nev. Rev. Stat. § 78.747). “The question of whether a stockholder, director or 12 officer acts as the alter ego of a corporation must be determined by the court as a matter of law.” 13 Nev. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 78.747. “Nevada has long recognized that although corporations are 14 generally to be treated as separate legal entities, the equitable remedy of ‘piercing the corporate 15 veil’ may be available to a plaintiff in circumstances where it appears that the corporation is acting 16 as the alter ego of a controlling individual.” LFC Marketing Group, Inc. v. Loomis, 8 P.3d 841, 17 845 (Nev. 2000) (citing McCleary Cattle Co. v. Sewell, 317 P.2d 957 (Nev. 1957)). “Indeed, the 18 ‘essence’ of the alter ego doctrine is to ‘do justice’ whenever it appears that the protections 19 provided by the corporate form are being abused.” Id. at 845–46 (citing Polaris Indus. Corp. v.
20 Kaplan, 747 P.2d 884, 888 (Nev. 1987)).

21 Three elements must be satisfied, by preponderance of the evidence, to justify a finding 22 that an individual is the alter ego for a corporation: “(1) the corporation must be influenced and 23 governed by the person asserted to be the alter ego; (2) there must be such unity of interest and 24 ownership that one is inseparable from the other; and (3) the facts must be such that adherence to 25 the corporate fiction of a separate entity would, under the circumstances, sanction a fraud or 26 promote injustice.” Id. at 846 (internal punctuation marks omitted). The requirements are 27 conjunctive; each of the elements must be present before the alter ego doctrine can be applied. N.
28 Arlington Med. Bldg., Inc. v. Sanchez Const. Co., 471 P.2d 240, 243 (1970). Further, the Nevada

1 Supreme Court has recognized that “[t]he corporate cloak is not lightly thrown aside.” Lorenz
2 v. Beltio, Ltd., 963 P.2d 488, 496 (Nev. 1998) (quoting Baer v. Amos J. Walker, Inc., 452 P.2d 3 916, 916 (Nev. 1969)). The Nevada Supreme Court has emphasized that “[t]here is no litmus test 4 for determining when the corporate fiction should be disregarded; the result depends on the 5 circumstances of each case.” Id. The Court first considers the third required element, finding that 6 adhering to the corporate fiction here would not sanction a fraud or promote injustice. The Court 7 then turns to the second required element, finding in the alternative that there is no unity of interest 8 and ownership between Leany and Century Steel.

9 a. Fraud or Injustice

10 The Court first turns to the possibility of the corporate form sanctioning a fraud or 11 promoting an injustice in this matter. Zurich essentially argues that it should be allowed to recover 12 the alleged debt from Leany to prevent sanctioning fraud or promoting injustice based on three 13 facts: (1) Leany received a substantial amount of money from the sale of Century Steel; and 14 (2) Century Steel could not satisfy the Zurich’s demand for the debt in 2013 and then 2015; and 15 (3) Leany has yet to wind down or dissolve the company. The Court disagrees.

16 The undisputed facts in this matter demonstrate that, after operating as a successful 17 business for decades, Century Steel satisfied its known debts at the time of its sale. Century Steel 18 then set aside a substantial amount of funds—over two million dollars—for forthcoming debts that 19 were then unknown. It also obtained additional insurance coverage related to ceasing its operations 20 and increased the letter of credit issued in favor of Zurich. Century Steel distributed the remaining 21 sale proceeds only after satisfying its existing debts and securing additional insurance protections.

22 Further, Century Steel was not aware of the debt Zurich now seeks; indeed, the debt did 23 not yet exist. Zurich first notified Century Steel of the debt five years after the sale of Century 24 Steel and then demanded payment two years later. The fact that Century Steel “ran into financial 25 difficulty” decades after operating as a successful business and could not satisfy a debt five years 26 after it ceased operations does not indicate a fraud or injustice. See Ecklund v. Nevada Wholesale 27 Lumber Co., 562 P.2d 479, 480 (Nev. 1977) (finding the record did not support a finding of 28 injustice specifically because the corporation did not appear undercapitalized since “it conducted

1 business for 12 years before running into financial difficulty”). This fact also does not require 2 Leany to personally satisfy the debt. Leany did not personally guarantee the insurance policies or 3 the deductible agreements, and the record is void of any evidence suggesting he intended to do so.
4 See id. (recognizing the party seeking to apply the alter ego doctrine “knew it was dealing with a 5 corporation and could not reasonably have relied on [the individual’s] personal credit, absent any 6 conduct by [the individual] inducing it to do so.”). The Court therefore finds that the record does 7 not demonstrate that allowing the corporate form would sanction a fraud or promote an injustice 8 based on Zurich’s inability to recover the alleged debt.

9 b. Unity of Interest and Ownership

10 In the alternative, the Court finds there is no unity of interest and ownership between Leany 11 and Century Steel. When considering the unity of interest between an individual and a corporation, 12 courts consider “the following factors, though not conclusive [...] : (1) commingling of funds; (2) 13 undercapitalization; (3) unauthorized diversion of funds; (4) treatment of corporate assets as the 14 individual's own; and (5) failure to observe corporate formalities.” LFC Marketing Group, 8 P.3d 15 at 845; see also Polaris Indus. Corp., 747 P.2d at 997. “Moreover, merely influencing and 16 governing a corporation does not necessarily demonstrate the unity of interest and ownership 17 resulting in the requisite inseparability of a corporation and shareholder”. Wyatt v. Bowers, 103 18 Nev. 593, 597, 747 P.2d 881, 883 (1987).

19 Zurich first argues that Leany commingled funds with Century Steel by unilaterally 20 determining when to loan Century Steel funds to satisfy corporate debts. Zurich emphasizes that 21 the loans Leany has made have not been paid back in full and some are not documented via 22 promissory notes. But the record lacks any evidence of Leany commingling Century Steel’s funds 23 with his property in an effort to avoid Century Steel’s obligations. Loaning money to a corporation 24 to satisfy an outstanding debt does not equate to liquidating a corporation’s funds to avoid a debt.
25 The latter is the type of activity the alter ego doctrine serves to defend against. See Polaris Indus.
26 Corp., 747 P.2d at 888 (applying the alter ego doctrine to corporate officers that used corporate 27 funds in a personal manner, leaving the corporation unable to repay its debts). There is no evidence 28 that Leany benefited personally from loaning money to Century Steel; indeed, the opposite is 1 clearly true. Thus, Leany choosing when to and when not to loan his personal funds to assist in 2 satisfying Century Steel's debt does not establish a commingling of funds as contemplated by the 3 alter ego doctrine.

4 Zurich next argues that Century Steel was undercapitalized. The Court disagrees. Century
5 Steel operated as a successful business—grossing millions of dollars annually—for decades. It set 6 aside two million dollars for unknown debts after settling its known debts at the time of the sale.
7 Century Steel also increased the letter of credit in favor of Zurich at the time of the sale. Zurich
8 invoiced Century Steel for the alleged debt five years later. The exhaustion of the set-aside funds 9 and the letter of credit, due to litigation and other forthcoming debts, five years after the sale of 10 Century Steel does not indicate that Century Steel was undercapitalized. See Ecklund, 562 P.2d 11 at 480 (holding that a successful corporation “running into financial difficulty” does not support a 12 finding of undercapitalization).

13 Zurich finally argues that Leany failed to observe corporate formalities by failing to:
14 (1) document each loan made to Century Steel; (2) hold regular Board meetings after he became 15 the sole director and officer; and (3) wind down and dissolve Century Steel after the sale. The 16 Court finds these facts unpersuasive based on the sequence of the circumstances in this matter.
17 Specifically, Century Steel observed corporate formalities during the years it was an active 18 corporation. Century Steel's years of active operation encompass the time at which Century Steel 19 contracted with Zurich. The failure to observe some corporate formalities years after the contract 20 was formed and after the debt became due does not convince the Court that a unity of interest 21 exists between Leany and Century Steel as contemplated by the alter ego doctrine.

22 23 VI. CONCLUSION

24 IT IS ORDERED that Plaintiff Todd Leany's Motion for Summary Judgment (ECF No.
25 27) is GRANTED. The Court orders declaratory relief as follows: Todd Leany is not an alter ego 26 of Century Steel Incorporated and therefore is not subject to the arbitration proceedings initiated 27 by Zurich American Insurance Company that are related to this matter.

28 ///

1 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that Defendant Zurich American Insurance Company's 2 Motion for Summary Judgment (ECF No. 28) is DENIED.

3 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the remaining claims and counterclaims are dismissed 4 accordingly.

5 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Clerk of the Court is instructed to enter judgment 6 accordingly and close this case.
